Pearl Harbor Dock Will Be Built To Take Largest Ships

The Secretary of the Navy in his annual report says:

The department regards the immediate development of a base at Pearl Harbor as a matter of the · highest importance.

Congress at its last session authorized the construction of a dry dock at the naval station, Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, the limit of cost 4 + being fixed at $2,000,000. This sum would provide a dock approximately 850 feet long.

In view of the geographical situation of this dock and in consideration of its great importance to naval efficiency in the Pacific, the conclusion has been reached. after careful consideration of the matter, that it should be lengthened by about 300 feet, and should be so designed as to accommodate more than one vessel at a time. In other words it is believed that a dock approximateby 1140 feet in length, capable of accommodating a battle ship of an extreme length of 564 feet and at the same time another ship of 536 feet in length, is demanded and would be a wise, farseeing, and economical provision. all things being taken into account. A dry dock of this size will cost more money than has been appropriated for this pur- pose and legislative authority will therefore be required if the limit • of cost be so changed. The mat-

Another Examination May Be Held In Near Future

Before the Pearl Harbor work i vell under way, another examination for dredging inspectors will have to be held at the Naval Station or other arrangements will have to be made. There were but fifteen applicants in all who appeared to take the examiration Wednesday afternoon last and, though the results of the examination have not been made public, it is generally understood that several of them failed to pass,

There will be from twelve to fifeen inspectors needed by the time work is going on full swing, and either another examination will be held, or inspectors will be brought ver from the mainland. Which course the authorities will take, they have not announced.

The requirements for dredge inpectors are very severe, and the examinations are stiff. Not only must a man have had practical experience in order to pass, but he must have a oroad, general education. The remuneration is not sufficient to cause applicants to flock to the examinations in great numbers but $3.60 a day, however, so men who already have good employment are not anxious to work for the Government, especially as quite a bit of study is needed before the average man can hope to pass the examina
